

GREEN SPACES

Building stronger and happier communities

Tree planting is associated with increased voter turnout in primary and general elections.

Community garden programs can reduce food insecurity, improve dietary intake, and strengthen family relationships.

Community gardens create social ties, help reduce crime, empower residents, and help them feel safer in their neighborhood.

Neighborhoods with homes facing trees and greenery experience lower crime rates.